Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

Farr's Technique

It's Something

Hey, Joe Dwyer!

REARLESSNESS of how far the Joe Louis tomorrow night, Tommy Farr probably will suffer less from socks than he has already suffered from the caustic wit of American sport writers. He hasn't learned that it is better for his share of the gate receipts to have himself written about in a journal way than not written about at all.

The sport writing fraternity is really doing itself proud at the expense of this serious lad from Tommydore. He has a habit of butting with his head and the wire-cracking corps insists that he can do much more damage with one of these butts than he can with either fist. They are aware of Joe Louis to insist that a third boxing glove be strapped to the top of Farr's head.

But from dreams of such stuff, you can sift out a few reliable facts about the Welshman's style. He guards his chin largely by keeping it tucked behind one shoulder. There have been a number of good fighters who used this style and to one can deny that it is effective if you can keep your button entrenched this way when the going becomes fast and furious.

Most British fighters have the straight up stance of a boxer and do very little weaving. Farr however fights from a sideways crouch, ducking most of his attacking with a feint left. He carries this portside gun low, sometimes outstretched from his hip and sometimes it just hangs limp at his side. When he shoots it, it may take the form of a jab, uppercut or hook—a peculiar combination, of all three according to those who have watched him in action. This left is exceptionally accurate, but no one seems to have been impressed by the power behind it. It's good for sniping points and not bothering an opponent, but it doesn't seem to pack any sleeping powers.

He's A Versatile Bloke, Wot?

THIRTY boys who have been watching Farr in his training have decided that his ring forework is a combination of the Dempsey weave, the Schmeling shuffle, the Irish jig, the Nipper dance shift and the Doubleback movement. One sport writer claimed that he detected a Pussycat ballet movement in Farr's forework, but the others insist that this series was just making things worse since the boxer has never been to a ballet was one of Minusky's blunders.

"I never bother to elaborate Farr's plans of defence for a fight. I just never put out a defence," he explains. "In Wales, fighters must never think of defence. All that matters is the attack." That's the spirit Tommy! Danced if you don't sound like a fighting man regardless of what they say about you.

Thomas goes on to explain that he has never seen Joe Louis (as he calls Louis) fight. "I have never even seen him in movies and I have never talked to anyone about his style. I'd know all I want to know about him when we've got in the ring together. I'd have his style analyzed by the end of the first round."

Note To Coach Joseph Dwyer

HIS is an innovative Jo-Jo which will bring your sub out to the grid with a spectacular rattle that is bound to please the fans.

Coach Joe McMillan of Indiana University is seriously planning to put his sub in a special high up in the stands opposite the 30-yard line. When he wants one, he will turn and hold a card with the number of the man he needs. This lad will then throw off his blanket, grab his helmet and dive feet first down a metal slide like those they use for farewells at hospitals. The slide will deliver the grinner at the coach's feet in nothing flat. The retiring player should reach the bench in the air by means of an elevator.

It is not absolutely certain that McMillan is going for it. He has his reasons. He contends that it is impossible for players on the bench to follow the game when the play gets down in scoring territory. From the bench the whole thing could be followed perfectly and the players on the bench would be able to see exactly where mistakes were made and how they could be avoided.

GENERAL'S DEFENDED BY HIS DAUGHTER

She Heard Father Discuss
Soldier Execution in Home, Paper Told

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—(Byline) In the defense of her father, Brigadier-General F. P. Crozier, Mrs. Anderson of Winnipeg, Sask., said in a letter to a Winnipeg newspaper: "He is fighting as hard for peace now as he fought for Britain in 1914."

Author of several books and now a prominent pacifist, General Crozier aroused controversy in England and Canada with the latest work, "The Men I Killed."

MANY EXECUTED

"In the book he charges that many men believed at home to have been 'killed in action' during the Great War actually died at the hands of a fellow officer or comrade."

"I know for a fact that the charges made by him in his book are justified," Mrs. Anderson wrote.

NOT A LIAR

"These things were discussed many times in our home," she said. "I am a young girl at school, but I know the truth about the war."

"Whether he is right or wrong in his charges, I am sure that he is not a liar and that he is not a traitor."

"I am sure that he is not a traitor and that he is not a liar."

Mountain Lions Become Pets Of Teen-Age Girls

Snap on Nose Stops Stalking
Leo When He Forgets
He Is the Pet

SONORA ISLAND B.C., Aug. 25.—A British Columbia mountain lion can break a cow's neck with a blow of his paw, yet two teen-agers preyed on him because the predator beast has become the friend of three away from home on this sparsely-settled island.

Leo and Gertie caught eight feet long and weighing over 200 pounds, growl, August Sorenson's yard at the end of half-hour chase. The chains are not to prevent them attacking.

Twice Leo has snapped his chain to stalk some barnyard animal. Once it was a pig, and once it was a cow. Leo and Gertie are kept by a woman who lives on the island.

Another time Leo and Gertie were out on a hunt and through rough ground and then to get or play with a goat he had cornered, and once Leo arrived in time to be sprayed at the Sorenson's dog. The blow left the dog's head in a mess.

Leo and Gertie survived from four mountain lions given to the Sorenson's by a friend of theirs. They are now about three years old. Sometimes Sorenson, taking one of his daughters with him, is absent for days inspecting the twine.

PRIVILEGES IN ORIENT TO END FOR OUTSIDERS

Italian Sees Far East Unit
Some Day to Oust
All Foreigners

TURIN, Italy, Aug. 25.—(Alberto de Stefani, former Italian minister of finance and until lately a financial adviser to the Japanese government, predicted today that the present Sino-Japanese conflict would be the first of a series of "special privileges" in China and Japan which would be able to resist Japan with violence.

COMING HOME

Prof. de Stefani telegraphed his prediction to the newspaper La Stampa of Turin from the steamship Victoria, on which he is en route from China to Italy.

"The inevitable formation of China as a great civil and military state and its possible future union with Japan will constitute a new factor of instability in the Orient for the realization of the principle 'Asia for the Asiatics'."

"Japan will be the banner bearer in this policy."

It will eliminate or diminish in the Far East the present position of the European powers, which will be indefensible under co-operative pressure from both China and Japan.

The last hours of European and American privilege in the Orient will be virtually destroyed, and the immense work accomplished by Europe and America in China will remain for the exclusive benefit of nationalist China."
